Virus surge nationwide not seen locally

‘We plan on staying proactive’
BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Reported cases of COVID-19 are going up all over the country but local officials are optimistic that Jefferson County can weather the storm as it prepares to enter the final stage of the state’s reopening plan next week.

Local health and government officials met online on Friday morning for the final scheduled COVID-19 briefing by the Jefferson County Emergency Management Agency. While officials acknowledged that the disease does appear to be having a resurgence nationwide, they also believe that by continuing to stay vigilant, the city of Madison and surrounding communities can continue to stay healthy. “We plan on staying proactive. We have been very fortunate relative to surrounding counties and I think that’s a credit to the officials in this county and the citizens for stepping up and doing what was necessary,” Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said. “We need to continue to do those things that we have been doing. We need to wear face coverings and carry hand sanitizer around with us. I think it is because of doing those things we have been as fortunate as we have.” Jefferson County has reported 59 total COVID-19 cases since the pandemic began in early March, far lower than all but one of the surrounding Indiana counties. Clark County has seen 605 cases so far, Jennings 164, Scott 154 and Ripley 111. Only Switzerland County, with 22 cases, has had fewer infections than Jefferson. Across the Ohio River, Carroll County has reported 30 cases while Trimble County now has six. Kentucky has had 14,617 cases statewide. Both Courtney and Tammy Monroe, the Jefferson County Health Department Administrator, credit the community’s quick action for keeping the numbers low. “The U.S. has seen large increases all over the country

Madison to develop new website

M3 Live plans more events
BY MARK CAMPBELL

Madison’s Board of Public Works approved a contract Thursday to hire a new company to design and host the city’s website beginning next year as the city moves to make its online information portal more flexible and less expensive to operate.

The Board approved a five-year $29,612 contract with eGov Strategies in Indianapolis to redesign the site and make it more easy to navigate, expand the city’s options for online registration and bill payments, provide a better calendar system and better utilize social media.

The city’s current contract expires in February 2021 and the existing site is in need of a major refresh that would cost almost $23,000 if Madison remained with the current provider and about $67,985 in hosting and other fees over a five-year period, said Madison Community Relations Director Hannah Fagen, who has administered the city’s website since joining Mayor Bob Courtney’s administration in January.

“The current site has a lot of limitations and there is a cost for every change,” Fagen said. “With the new site we’ll spend more money over the first year but over the five-year contract we will see a savings.”

“There’s a lot of information but it’s just not very user friendly,” said Courtney, who has utilized the website and various forms of social media extensively since taking office and especially during the COVID-19 pandemic the city has been dealing with for months.

The city had the option of a 3-year contract or a 5-year contract costing about $800 more. However, Fagen said the 5-year deal was the best value because it includes a refresh during the contract period and that alone could be a $10,000 value.

Fagen said it will take the city and EGov Strategies about six months to develop and design the new site so by signing the contract now, the site should be ready to go live and provide a smooth transition with no loss

Local musician Joe Perkinson entertains at the Madison Music Movement concert on Mulberry Street on Friday. The concert, the Second M3 Live event since the state’s lifting of tighter crowd restrictions recently, is targeted at reaching the lunchtime crowd and spreading the word on Madison’s growing reputation as a city for music in Indiana.

In other business, the Board approved a request by local Madison Music Movement organizers for a street closing in the 300 block of South Mulberry Street from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Friday, June 26, to hold a free live concert involving local musician Joe Perkinson in the latest M3 Live

Eric Holcomb partially relaxed some of Indiana’s crowd restrictions earlier this month and other events are likely to be scheduled moving forward, organizer Tony Novello said while requesting the closure. Jefferson County ranks 13th in state unemployment

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Jefferson County now holds the 13th highest unemployment rate out of 92 Indiana counties at 14.6%, the newest round of filings from the Indiana Department of Workforce Development showed.

Indiana is among the slowest-recovering states for unemployment, ranking 44th in a study from the financial website WalletHub. New unemployment insurance claims continue to grow statewide and totaled 31,885 the week of June 20, compared to an adjusted count of 24,017 the week before, according to IDWD.

Other southeast Indiana counties appear to have been hit just as hard, with Scott County placing fourth, Decatur sixth, Jennings 10th, Switzerland 12th and Ohio County 16th on the list.

Unemployment filings, on the decline since peaking at 146,000 in late March, have been on the increase the past three weeks as more businesses feel a continued impact from the pandemic.

One example is Madison’s JCPenney store, which employed more than 30 people and will not reopen due to the company filing bankruptcy in early June. A neighboring department store at River Pointe Mall, Gordman’s is rumored to be closing in the coming months but plans have not been announced by parent company Stage Stores.

Supplement store chain GNC filed for bankruptcy Tuesday and announced it would close 248 stores. Madison was not on that list but stores will close in Greencastle, Nora Plaza in Indianapolis, Kendallville and New Castle, according to the company.

According to WalletHub, coronavirus has wiped out all job gains since the recession of 2008 and 2009 in which 8.8 million jobs were lost but 22.7 million were added in the subsequent decade. Initial jobless claims in the last 14 weeks have totaled 47.2 million nationwide, more than five times the number lost in the recession, WalletHub’s researchers found.

Thursday’s report from IDWD also showed an additional 17,439 Indiana residents applied for benefits last week under the new Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA) program for self-employed and gig workers, up 12,016 new claims from the previous week. The state reported 209,080 people were receiving continued PUA as of June 6, up from 117,441 the prior week. Layoffs remain high nationally, but appear to be slowing as the number of workers applying for jobless benefits dropped for a 12th straight week.

Higher unemployment has also created a bigger reliance on food banks, community kitchens and food pantries, with those programs seeing a 154% increase in visits since March, the Indiana Family and Social Services Administration reported this week.

State Rep. Randy Frye is encouraging those needing assistance to turn to the state's new Operation Food program, which coordinates a network of 12 food banks and 1,750 pantries or community kitchens. So far five meal sites have been designated in Jefferson County: Resurrection Lutheran Church, Jefferson County House of Hope Food, Salvation Army, Point of Grace Church and Rykers Ridge Baptist Church.

Madison's Salvation Army distributed about 145 boxes of food during its third drive-through pantry on Monday, which was started in April to help families in need during the COVID crisis, Lt. Justin Hartley said.

Salvation Army also scaled up its rental assistance program at the start of the pandemic to help families pay for living costs, collecting $19,000 in donations.

Salvation Army also scaled up its rental assistance program at the start of the pandemic to help families pay for living costs, collecting $19,000 in donations from the Jefferson County United Way, Community Foundation of Madison and Jefferson County, Homeless Coalition of Southern Indiana and Central Credit Union. The local SA center normally ran that program with a budget of $1,000 before the pandemic, Hartley said.

With landlords starting to end eviction moratoriums and the need becoming more pressing, Salvation Army has already used $10,000 of those funds to help locals families pay their rent, he said.

"It was kind of a slow trickle in the beginning when we were starting it and getting it out there, but over the past couple weeks it's picked up a bit," Hartley said.

BY THE NUMBERS: COVID-19

Indiana reported 522 new cases on Thursday, its highest single-day total since June 17, but overall the state has been trending downward since its high of 946 on April 26. The state has now reported 43,655 total cases and 2,394 deaths to date. However, there have been only eight reported deaths statewide over the past week.

and there have been outbreaks in surrounding states as states open up," Monroe said. "There is no wall around Jefferson County and we have to continue doing what we have been doing, which is practicing good social distancing, wearing facial coverings when we can't social distance and washing our hands."

The state of Indiana is currently in Stage 4 of its reopening plan which means that restaurants are open at 75% capacity while bars, movie theaters and pools are open at 50%, all with proper social distancing guidelines in place. Those restrictions are expected to be lifted next week when Gov. Eric Holcomb is expected to begin Stage 5, the final level of his Back on Track in Indiana plan.

Indiana reported 522 new cases on Thursday, its highest single-day total since June 17, but overall the state has been trending downward since its high of 946 on April 26. The state has now reported 43,655 total cases and 2,394 deaths to date. However, there have been only eight reported deaths statewide over the past week.

Courtney said the city is taking steps to ensure that its citizens can remain healthy, especially as the Fourth of July holiday nears next week.

"Almost all of our summer events have either been canceled or greatly reduced so that we don't expect to have the large influx of people from out of town that we normally expect," Courtney said. "We will be installing hand sanitizing stations up and down Main Street so that those that are out enjoying our shops and restaurants can stay healthy as well as those that will be attending the fireworks. The important thing is keep doing those things that we have been doing."

Cubs' Eder wins Northern Junior Masters in playoff

BY COURIER STAFF

Madison's Keara Eder shot a six-over 148 to win the Indiana Golf Federation Northern Junior Masters event at the Noble Hawk Golf Club in Kendallville on Monday.

Eder, who will be a junior at Madison Consolidated High School in the fall, followed an impressive 71 in Sunday's first round with a 77 on Monday that allowed NorthWood junior Cybil Stillson to come from behind and force a playoff.

Eder then won the title in the playoff, her first of the abbreviated summer season.

Eder, who reached the state finals last season as a sophomore at Madison, played an almost flawless round on Sunday, with two birdies and two bogeys to finish the day with an even-par 71 and seize the first-round lead.

Round two was a struggle

David Campbell

from the start for the Cub. Eder bogeyed three of the first five holes then took a double bogey on No. 18 to close the first nine at five-over.

Another bogey on No. 2 dropped her to six-over, but she recovered to play the final seven holes with one birdie and one bogey to finish the round at six-over 77.

Lapel junior Macy Beeson finished third, two strokes back of the leaders with a 150.

Eder, who won seven events on the tour last summer, has played in only two events so far this year. She placed 26th in the Indiana Junior PGA Championships in Noblesville on June 3-4 with a 168 (83-85).

Shawe softball coach resigns

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Tim Torrance has stepped down as head softball coach at Shawe Memorial High School after six seasons.

Torrance, who struggled with numbers during his tenure, never won more than four games in a single season as he attempted to rebuild the program. With no junior high feeder program until recently, the Hilltoppers routinely fielded teams with no more than 11 players, half of whom were either in their first or second year playing the sport.

Regardless of the circumstances, Torrance said that he enjoyed his tenure at Shawe.

"While this was not an easy decision, it was the right one at this time. I appreciate the opportunity to be involved with Prince of Peace Athletics as the head softball coach at Shawe the last six years," Torrance said. "I am especially grateful for the student-athletes and staff members who dedicated so much time to the program. I wish the school and their athletic programs nothing but the best in the future."

The Hilltoppers went 12-82 in Torrance's five seasons. This past season was wiped out due to the COVID-19 pandemic. He also served as head volleyball coach at the school for three years but resigned from that position early in the spring.

"We have been fortunate for Tim's leadership and companionship over the past six years, and he will be greatly missed," the school said in a statement. "He has been a great role model and coach to all our student-athletes, and we greatly appreciate all that he has done since taking over the program. We wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors and hope that he will always remain one of our biggest fans."

Torrance's dual resignations mean that Shawe is now seeking four varsity head coaches for the 2020-21 school year. Along with volleyball and softball, the school is still searching for a boys soccer coach and a boys golf coach.

Canceled attendance causing distress

Dear Annie: This summer we have been invited to four weddings. Of the four events, three have been canceled due to the coronavirus pandemic.

We are in the high-risk category with our age and underlying health conditions. The one remaining scheduled wedding would require us to travel by car to another state, which would mean stopping for gas, taking restroom breaks at gas stations and staying overnight at a hotel. We would love to attend the wedding, but we had to cordially decline, as it wasn't worth the risk of our potentially getting COVID-19.

Well, now we are getting messages from the relatives on how their feelings are hurt, that we really should be attending and that they are taking it personally. The decision we made was strictly due to the pandemic, our health and safety, and there was nothing personal about the decision. They are anticipating a couple hundred guests at this wedding, so you'd think they wouldn't mind too much that the two of us won't be there.

This is dividing our family greatly. Any advice would be appreciated. — Divided Family

Dear Divided Family: The cynic in me wonders if they might be trying to guilt a gift out of you. I think what's more likely, though, is that you're not the only ones who have declined to attend due to the pandemic. They might have booked a huge venue and now are footing an equally huge bill.

Whatever the case, you made the right decision for you and your husband. Reiterate to them that it was nothing personal and you truly wish you could be there. If they continue to take issue with that, refer them to your doctor.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Al R." about bathroom safety for seniors, and I have a few suggestions. First, you can get the things you need from Medicare. Just ask your doctor for them. Your doctor will see to it. Medicare Supplemental insurance, if you have it, will work with the doctor and provide you with what you need.

Also, you can get wheelchairs, walkers, shower chairs, almost anything you need, free from a church or Veterans of Foreign Wars Post, that has donated ones in their coffers.

When you're a senior or handicapped, it is amazing what you can get. Don't feel ashamed for asking for help or for accepting charity; those who donate are paying it forward. — Gretchen

Dear Gretchen: I did not realize that these supplies were available for free through these channels, and I'm happy to print your letter to refer others to these resources as well. But I'm also printing your letter because I love your closing sentiment. It's right to give others the chance to pay it forward.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! Dealing with a dinner table bully

Dear Annie: I know a 60-year-old woman who wears high-heeled shoes and no pantyhose with miniskirts — without even a slip underneath. When she wears light-colored miniskirts, they're somewhat see-through in the daylight. She wears bikini-style underwear, and through the skirt, there are visible rolls around her bottom, waist and stomach. She's not really someone to whom I can say something, so what would you recommend? — Curious

LANE
DEAR ANNIE

we wear face masks in public to keep others safe. I said that I thought it was important, especially since my father was currently in the hospital suffering from the coronavirus. He is a resident of a nursing home that has been on lockdown since March, and there was a large outbreak of the virus at his home. It has been a difficult time for my family since we have not been able to visit him.

A few days later, we were having dinner with Cal and Sandy along with two other couples. Cal made a snide comment about my political affiliation, which I brushed off, and he made a snide comment about my profession, which I also brushed off. He then made derogatory comments about my dad's so-called coronavirus illness. My dad had just been released from the hospital that day and, thankfully, was doing much better. I was shocked and didn't say anything at that time.

The next day, I did a lot of thinking and decided to cut this man out of my life. I unfriended him on social media and made a vow to not associate with him again. Is it fair to ask my husband to also quit associating with Cal? It's going to be difficult because we go to the same church, and he and my husband are in a club together. — Hurting in Louisville

Dear Hurting in Louisville: Cutting Cal out of your life sounds like a great decision. He sounds insensitive and like a true bully. Right now, your focus should be on your well-being and your family's well-being. In the future, if you find yourself with a bully such as Cal, and the wherewithal to have such a conversation, consider telling him to stop the snide comments. Sticking up for yourself is an act of self-care that can create a ripple effect of others sticking up for themselves, too.

It's time to have an honest talk with your husband. He heard what Cal said about your father and your profession, as well as Cal's lack of social graces so as not to discuss political issues at the dinner table. When this happens in the future, how would you like your husband to support you? And if he is to continue his friendship with Cal, then your husband must demand an apology from Cal to you.
